

SURPLUS PROFITS TO GIVE BETTER PURSES

By J. W. MARCHBANK

When earnings exceed the reasonable 10 per cent return on the investment of a race track association then I advocate the overplus should be used in betterments and in increasing purses. It is no longer a debatable proposition that good purses make good sport; there is no such thing as high class racing unless the offerings to the horsemen are adequate. Good purses insure good sport; low purses convert a great pastime into that most undesirable of things—a racket.

Frank consideration of the condition confronting us shows conclusively that the game must be built up into an institution that all our citizens can point to with pride or else—it will degenerate into a petty scramble for inordinate profits. Early action will save the day.

That 10 per cent is an extremely liberal rate must be admitted by all giving due thought to the matter. In some states 4 per cent has been proposed as the limit on earnings. Such an eminent authority as Jouett Shouse, alarmed at the dangers ahead, not so long ago said:

"Those who put their money into race track properties should be content with 6 or 7 per cent on that money."

Interested parties have spread an alarm up and down the state that the farmers will never consent to legislative cutting down of the present 12 per cent "take" on the pools in the mutual wagering if that reduction brings a smaller return than 4 per cent to the state. To that we reply:

Florida electors consented to taking less than 4 per cent as the state's portion of the commission on the betting pools. Are Californians to be known to the world as being less liberal, less reasonable and less fair than the residents of Florida?

The two changes go hand in hand, that of limiting the return on a track investment to 10 per cent and reducing the "take" from 12 to 9 per cent. Comparatively few of the millions of people in the state ever go to the races and it could not be conceived in our wildest flights that the vast majority would want to see anything but fair treatment to the fans. The followers of the game are willing to pay a tax, that is certain, but they have a right to fight against being over-taxed.

COUNTY BOARD BACK EXECUTIVE IN APPOINTMENTS

By Vote Of Three To Two Endorse All Officials As Manager Suggested

Supervisor Manuel Francis of Half Moon Bay was elected as chairman of the Board last Monday at their meeting in Redwood City.

After the organization of the Board a number of appointments made by County Executive Walter T. Kellogg were ratified, although there were a number of objections from interested citizens, a large number of whom were in attendance at the meeting.

It is refreshing to note that, despite objections, the majority of the Board supported the constituted authority to make such appointments and also that the county manager refused to recede from his position regarding his announcements.

Those who voted to support Kellogg's appointees were Supervisors Witt, High and Francis.

Following are the new officials as named Monday:

Health director, Major Charles C. Gans; engineer, U. S. Marshall of Piedmont; coroner, William F. Crosby of Burlingame; purchasing agent, Stanley Kelly of Burlingame; tax collector, Ambrose McSweeney of South San Francisco, incumbent; treasurer, Harry Jenkins of Redwood City, incumbent; recorder, T. Clark Rice of Redwood City, incumbent; building inspector, William Watson Jr. of Burlingame; county publicity director, William McCarthy of Burlingame.

County Executive Kellogg said he would appoint a new board of health and welfare and a recreation commission at some future time.

The appointments made by the Board of Supervisors are as follows: County Agricultural Commissioner Max J. Leonard, reappointed; county sealer of weights and measures, John Garibaldi of Colma, reappointed.

The board of education, composed of George W. Hall of San Mateo, Henry C. Hall of San Bruno, Lester D. Henderson of Burlingame and John Gill of Redwood City, were reappointed.

The appointments laid over for thirty days were those of county librarian, county fire warden; planning commission and library trustees.

CROCKER PARENT TEACHERS HOLD REGULAR MEET

Plan Drive For Membership
During Period Of Next
Two Months

(Mrs. O. D. Pauw, Pub. Chairman)

Crocker P. T. A. held its regular meeting last Tuesday at the General Pershing School. The attendance was small, but the meeting was interesting for those present. A membership drive is planned for the next two months, beginning at once, under the direction of the membership chairman, Mrs. Virginia Davison.

Mrs. Eason, Recreation Chairman, reported that Supervised Play had been continued until June.

Mrs. J. E. Walker gave an interesting talk on "Thrift," taking for her example Benjamin Franklin, the originator of thrift. She said that she is taking up with the district officers a plan to have the children in the schools throughout the district from the fifth grade up through the eighth write essays on "Thrift," which will be judged and prizes given for the best.

Our Past President, Mrs. Julia V. Jordan, was reported ill and in the Community Hospital for an operation.

Plans are being made for two whists in the near future. At the next meeting of the Executive Board at the home of Mrs. J. E. Walker, 478 Frankfort street, on Friday, February 1, a luncheon and afternoon whist will be held, the luncheon to be at 12:15.

On Thursday evening, February 21, a monster whist is planned, to be held in the General Pershing School. The committee will consist of Mrs. Nora Clifton, Mrs. Edith Frazer, Mrs. Wegner and Mrs. Roberts.

Mrs. Floyd Huff, Seventeenth District Study Circle Chairman, gave an interesting and instructive talk on Study Circles, and at the end of her talk the Unit decided to organize a Study group.

Mrs. Pauw gave two solos, after which the Unit sang the P. T. A. song and prepared for the refreshment table.

The next meeting will be on Founder's Day. It will be under the direction of Mrs. J. E. Walker, and will be held at night.

WILL INSIST ON JUSTICE COURT FOR DALY CITY

City Merchants Association
Also Endorses Proposed
Move To Build High School Gymnasium

The Daly City Merchants Association held its first meeting of the year at Eagles Hall on Wednesday evening of this week. All officers were present on roll call. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Principal James Ferguson of the Jefferson Union High School asked endorsement of the association of a proposition to adopt a bond measure by the board of trustees of that district for the purpose of constructing a gymnasium and swimming pool and handball and tennis courts at the high school grounds. He said that the labor on this project would be donated by the federal government and that only sufficient funds need be raised by a bond issue to pay for material to complete this work.

Athletic Instructor Biggs also explained the necessity of these projects and said that the law was not being complied with in regard to physical instruction owing to lack of proper facilities.

A motion prevailed to endorse the proposal and to appoint a committee to work in conjunction with the board of school trustees to secure adoption of the proposed bond issue. The following committee was named by the president: W. E. Pitschke, Alfred Sordelli, H. H. Smith, Julius Twisten and P. L. Peterson.

The association was told that under the present setup there had been no provision for a court room and office for the justice of the peace of this township in Daly City. The following committee was appointed to appear before the Board of Supervisors in an effort to secure an appropriation to cover the expense of rental of such accommodation, so that court may be held in this city as well as in South San Francisco, where an office and court room has been fitted up in the City Hall: W. E. Pitschke, Andrew Vireno, F. T. Mather and Peter Pavlos.

A communication was ordered sent to the Volunteer Fire Department of Daly City, commending its members on their good work in preventing the spread of flames during the fire last week in the business district.

W. H. Clay was presented with a fine pen and pencil set in appreciation of his services for the past six years as recording and corresponding secretary, from which office he retired at the expiration of the year.

A committee composed of the officers of the association was named to meet with the City Council to assist in furthering that body's plans for proper safety stations and other improvements on Mission street after the widening has been completed.

The committee to appear before the Board of Supervisors was instructed to co-operate with Supervisor Witt in securing an appropriation of $12,500 to assist the city in the matter of expenses for improvements incidental to the widening of Mission street.

The evening closed with a social meeting at which refreshments were served to the members and guests.

COLMAN BACK AS DRUMMOND NOW

Thriller At Local Theater
Depicts Adventurer's
Latest Exploits

Ronald Colman returned from a year's vacation to bring an old friend back to the screen of the Daly City Theater, where "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back" begins a two day showing at the Daly City Theater, January 13, 14.

Ever since Colman made the earlier talkie, "Bulldog Drummond," the film-going public has retained a fond memory of the dashing Captain Hugh Drummond whom he first portrayed in that picture.

Drummond also holds a fond place in Colman's heart, for it was in the creation of this character that he scored his greatest screen hit.

It was pleasant news to the star, therefore, when Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl F. Zanuck informed him that they had purchased "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back" as his first starring vehicle under his new contract with their 20th Century Pictures.

The story is based on the latest novel by H. C. McNeile, depicting the further exploits of the lovable adventurer. The excitement starts when Drummond attempts to unravel a completely baffling mystery for a beautiful young girl whose uncle disappears strangely in the London house of a sinister Oriental prince.

Loretta Young portrays the girl, Warner Oland plays the Prince, Charles Butterworth is seen as Drummond's not quite bright friend Algy, and Una Merkel appears as the bride Algy deserts on her wedding night to dabble in mystery with Drummond. C. Aubrey Smith plays Inspector Nielson of Scotland Yard who contributes complications.

Roy Del Ruth, who directed "The Terror," the talkies first mystery thriller, handled the megaphone on this hair-raising sequel, which Nunnally Johnson, who was responsible for the brilliant screen version of "The House of Rothschild," prepared for the screen.

"A Lost Lady," with Barbara Stanwyck and Ricardo Cortez, is the second feature; also a Color Cartoon.

The Daly City American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars, will hold their Theater Party Tuesday, January 15, 1935. Pat O'Brien in "I Sell Anything" will be the feature show. And on the stage there will be a complete hour of vaudeville with the largest gathering of performers this theater has ever presented on the stage.

WILL REVIEW BOOK

Dr. Richard Day's Book, "Shadow of the Broad Brim," will be reviewed by Mrs. Mary Sexton at the federated county meeting of the Hamilton Square Womans Christian Temperance Union at 175 Post street, Friday, January 11 at 2 p. m. Mrs. Marguerite S. Spencer, the president will preside.

INTEREST IN ALASKA HIGHWAY GROWS FAST

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Wide publicity for the proposed Alaska Highway is winning many friends in favor of the early construction of the great road. One of the latest of the powerful organizations to come out for the altogether project is the Automobile Club of Southern California. Not only the section of the International Highway extending from the northern part of the United States through British Columbia and Yukon Territory to Fairbanks, Alaska, has gained extensive support, but all the other sections as well.

As has been pointed out at other times, the northern terminus of the long artery is Fairbanks and the southern terminus is Buenos Aires, Argentina. Already a survey has revealed that 83 per cent, nearly 11,000 miles, of the far-flung route is traversable by motorists in good weather.

One of the latest developments is the feasibility of the construction of a road from Hazelton, British Columbia, through the Yukon to Fairbanks. American engineers have completed a reconnaissance survey from Hazelton, the present terminus of the road out of Vancouver, to Fairbanks.

Walter W. Bradley, state mineralogist, makes an interesting reference in his latest report to unemployed men "making good" in their search for gold. He estimates as many as 15,000 persons were engaged last year in panning along river canyons and creeks of the state, garnering as much as $750,000 from these individually insignificant sources. The big incentive for the effort to make a living out of placer mining came in the raising of the price of gold to $35 an ounce.

President Roosevelt made his proclamation on January 31, 1934, establishing the new price. That the order was one of the most momentous in the history of the country and that it has helped materially in the progress we have made in getting out of the depression cannot be doubted. A further increase, say to $41.34, would be welcomed far and wide as a measure of almost incalculable good.

The total gold production for California for 1934 exceeded $22,000,000 in value, as compared with $15,683,075 in 1933. This year an even higher figure may be confidently expected.

Silver is coming into its own, too. An important move in the Dominion of Canada was the beginning of the coinage and distribution of silver early this year. As to the desirability of the use of silver coins, Sidney Norman, a well known expert on mining and collateral subjects, recently said in the Vancouver Sun:

"Thirty years ago there were few small bills in circulation in the West and there never was any serious objection to the weight of the coins. As a matter of fact, there is something real and comforting about the clink of metallic money, a feeling entirely lacking in a roll of dirty, germ-collecting paper.

"Even now, banks of several cities of the West, including Spokane and San Francisco, pass out silver coins for checks of lesser denomination than $5 and there is no objection to the custom. It is only the younger generation that prefers currency and that is largely because it knows not of what it speaks.

"We should like to see all bills under $5 recalled and silver coins substituted. Not only would such a plan help the cause of silver, but increase respect for the money of the realm."

The idea is not new to me, as I have made it a practice for some time to have silver dollars used in preference to paper, in properties of mine, such as the Tanforan race track. My hope is the use will become universal and all such articles as those in the northern journal help in the good work.

EXPECT RECORD SALES FOR COAST MOTOR DEALERS

Eastern Manufacturers Well Pleased With Plans For Pacific Auto Show

Expect the finest cars, the best performance, the lowest prices and in all price classes the greatest values that you have ever seen—and you will not be disappointed at this year's motor shows.

The motor car manufacturers have decided that the depression—with capital letters—is over. They believe that the public now has the buying power. And so they are surpassing even all their former efforts in putting the value into the 1935 cars.

Don't take my word for it—make your plans now to go to the Pacific Coast Automobile Show which opens in the San Francisco Civic Auditorium on January 19. The cars and their values will amaze you.

Production schedules are being increased. Henry Ford's announcement that he was going to build a million cars in 1935 has stepped up the tempo all along the line. Every other manufacturer, big and little, tackled his 1935 production and sales plans with new enthusiasm after his gold utterance by the Sage of Dearborn.

Every factory is working on new models. Every manufacturer has improved and bettered his cars. Every advertising agent has asked for a larger advertising appropriation. The automobile industry is going to make things hum in 1935.

And are the California dealers in step with this program of progress? We say yes—with emphasis—after a dozen or so interviews with various trade leaders here.

When New York and Detroit papers carried the story that Miss Grace Moore, that talented Metropolitan Opera Star and the hit of the year in the motion picture world, was going to appear at the San Francisco exhibit, the eastern motor men were loud in their praise of San Francisco aggressiveness and acumen.

As one New York newspaper man remarked, "Why, Grace Moore's singing is a four dollar attraction at any Broadway Theater, how your auto show management could secure her appearance on the coast is a marvel to me."

So, with the signs all favorable for 1935, and with record crowds assured for the forthcoming automobile display, California dealers are already beginning to worry whether they are going to be able to get cars fast enough to meet the demand.

INSTALLATION OF VETERAN FIREMEN

The Veteran Firemen held their meeting at the usual meeting place last Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

Goldkuhl; second vice president, Paul G. Selmi; marshal, N. J. Sombalio; chaplain, H. H. Smith; secretary, Edward J. Ford, treasurer, A. J. Green. J. Hesselien was re-elected chef.

Comrade Chaplain H. H. Smith gave a sterling talk to the members and stated that everyone should put his shoulder to the wheel and co-operate in helping improve and build up the city.

HIGH OVERHEAD IN COUNTY COSTS

San Mateo county spent $18.11 for each man, woman, and child in the county during the fiscal year 1932-33, according to a study tracing county dollars recently completed by California Taxpayers' Association. Of the $18.11 spent by the county, $4.32 went for general government and interest payments, $9.41 for protective and charitable services, and $4.38 for highways.

Pointing out that all county expenditures fall into two classes, those for direct current services which the government renders to the people of the community, and those for overhead, payments of interest on borrowed money and the cost of departments, such as the tax collector, which do not render any direct service to the individual, but are none the less necessary, L. D. Gifford, director of research of the association, said:

"In general, the taxpayer gets the best return for his money when the proportion of expense for general government and interest on past spendings is small and that for direct current services is high. The minimum overhead expenditure of $2.95 per capita occurred in Santa Clara county; only seven other counties fell below $3.50."

The study shows a definite trend toward high expenditures for overhead in counties with small population particularly among the counties with less than 10,000 inhabitants. There is no very definite trend in the expenditures for direct services to the public, the variation between counties being so great as to suggest the possibility of much improvement in the administration of these functions.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, which he names "Penelope," in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin retires from business, wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt is a rising young psychiatrist. He is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible.

CHAPTER II—Continued

"Lanny!" Stephen reproved her. Then to Dan McNamara: "Do you mean to tell me you left her out there unguarded? How would you explain her escape—if she had chosen to disappear?"

"I don't think she'd duck, Doc. But even if she tried it, I got a plain clothes man on guard."

"Please bring the patient in, Lanny," Stephen pleaded. "And then you might—" he glanced eloquently at their empty glasses. Lanny glared at him so he smiled—and she ceased to glare. But she went on mumbling.

Dan McNamara shook his head sadly. "Nothing wrong with that woman's thinking apparatus," he informed Stephen.

And then Lanny ushered the new patient in. She paused just inside the door, swept the room with a slow glance and permitted her gaze to come to rest on Stephen Burt, who rose and bowed to her. Instantly the frozen hostility tilted in her glance faded and she smiled. "Reminds me of a gargoyle," Stephen reflected.

"Meet my friend, Dr. Stephen Burt. Nance," Dan McNamara introduced her airily. "Doc, this is Nance Belden, alias Dorothy Case, alias Fay Barham, alias Elizabeth Vernon."

Stephen said politely that he was delighted to make her acquaintance, and Nance replied with acid directness. "Why?" Whereat Stephen Burt laughed and set a chair for her. Nance plumped herself down in it with a weary sigh, jerked off her jaunty hat and threw it on Stephen's desk. "All right, Steve. Shoot! What's the idea of the big convention? Another fishing expedition?"

"Now, Nance," Dan McNamara soothed her, "you cut that out. You're not talking to Doc Blenheim. Doc Burt's a gentleman."

Nance remembered her manners. "My error," she apologized.

From the doorway leading into the waiting room, Lanny gazed upon the girl with frank disapproval. Over Nance's shoulder she caught Stephen's eyes and shook her head sorrowfully.

"The old girl's shocked!" Nance laughed softly without looking around, while Lanny disappeared.

"How do you know, Miss Belden?" Stephen inquired.

"Mirror," and Nance Belden pointed. "Close your eyes," Stephen commanded, "and describe this room to me."

"All right. There are two empty highball glasses on the telephone stand back of you." She sniffed. "Bourbon. The stand's three feet high and the telephone book is in the compartment under the top of the stand. The telephone is one of those combination receiver-mouthpiece things like they use in English stage scenes, and the telephone cord is white. The desk is solid walnut, I think, flat-topped and clean 'n' have a bronze combination ink well, pen-rack, and pin-tray. There is a blue crayon pencil and a red crayon pencil and a black, gold-banded fountain pen on the pen rack. The fountain pen has green ink in it. I know because on the calendar pad on the desk, which is opened at November 23—although this is the 24th—you've written something with the pen very recently. You're sitting in a walnut swivel chair, brown leather upholstered, and a high back up to your shoulder tops. The Chief's chair is an over-stuffed rocker, and if you give him another drink he'll fall asleep in it. On the wall back of you, there is a framed diploma in Latin, issued to Stephen John Burt by Leland Stanford Junior University Medical school, and about four feet from it is the Oath of Hippocrates in a black frame, like the diploma. The print is old English and done in black and red. Across the room, in back of the chief, is a walnut bookcase, built in detachable tiers, and there's a white washstand in the corner close by it. The rug is beige colored and Chinese, and on the wall in back of me, where you can look at it readily, is a framed photograph of your father because he looks a great deal like you. In back of the door leads into the old lady's den and—"

Nance opened her handbag, took out a small mirror, held it up and opened her eyes an instant—"yes, I thought so. That door is ajar and the old lady is listening to every word I say."

"Now, I'll describe you. You're a darling. You're tall and you haven't started to grow a tummy yet. You're about thirty-two or three years old, your hair is dark brown and your eyes dark blue, and you have nice teeth, and they show when you smile. You have nice hands and your nails were manicured this morning, but you have a dirty spot on the finger-nail of your right index finger—no, it isn't dirt. It's iodine. Pardon! My error. Do I win first prize, Doc?"

"In a walk, Miss Belden. You are absolutely the most amazing person I have ever examined. You are one in a million—one of those rare persons who not only see everything at a glance but take a mental photograph of it. And remember it. Yes, you win a prize."

"I'll have a highball with you boys," said Miss Belden composedly.

"You'll not, you little—this and that," Lanny countered from behind the door. "The very idea!"

"Then the party breaks up here and now," Miss Belden informed Stephen.

"Lanny," Stephen called. "I hope you aren't forgetting the laws of hospitality."

"Come on, kid," the girl entreated Lanny. "Buy me one and I'll get the chief to do something nice for you in return."

"What influence has the likes of you with the chief of police?" Lanny was emerging with two highballs.

"Do you drive a car, Miss Lanning?" Nance Belden whistled sharply to Dan McNamara.

"Get out your card, Dan. Here's the fountain pen. Write as I dictate. Ready: 'To all traffic officers: The bearer, Miss Rebecca Lanning, has the freedom of the city. She has my authority to park where she pleases and she shall not be tagged. She cannot be arrested for anything except murder and even then she must not ride in the wagon. Signed: Dan McNamara, Chief of Police.'"

Dan McNamara obeyed, Nance Belden viced the card, blotted it and handed it to Lanny. "Now, you tell em all who's kind to you, Rebecca. I'm some kid, am I not? You bet I'm some kid. Dan knows it and your boss knows it and if, by now, you don't know it, I hope Steve fires you."

"You are some kid. I admit it. Thank you, dear. You shall have a highball."

"Have one yourself," Nance suggested grandly. "Let's all be sociable, eh, Steve?"

"Miss Belden—" Steve began.

"Call me Nance," the strange young creature interrupted. "Why all the formality?"

"Have you any objection, Nance, to telling me your real name?"

"None at all. I don't know my real name."

"Who were your parents?"

"I don't know."

"Why did you steal the silk stockings?"

Nance threw back her head and laughed. "Why you silly, I had runs in every pair I owned."

"Poor dear!" Lanny was speaking. Her hand strayed over the girl's jet black, shiny bob; her fingers sought a shell-like ear and tugged it gently.

Nance looked up at the nurse, surprise and friendliness shining in her eyes.

"Why, you're sweet, aren't you? Why, you darling!" And she lifted her face for Lanny to kiss. Lanny kissed her. Trust Lanny for that.

"It's too late to go further tonight, Dan," Lanny said. "Bring her in at nine tomorrow morning."

"Can't, Lanny." With a bound the excellent McNamara had landed beside Lanny in the garden of friendship, as one might say. "She's due in the police court at nine o'clock for sentence. Right away she'll be waltzed over to the Superior court to the judge that gave her a suspended sentence two years ago. She hasn't made good, so he'll sign the commitment papers, and it'll be some time before we see our Nance again."

"Has she an attorney?"

"The public defender, that's all."

Lanny looked at Stephen. Stephen looked at Lanny. Both nodded.

"Get the best in town, Dan," Lanny urged the chief. "Doctor Burt will appear in court and plead for a stay of sentence. We'll tell that judge a few things about criminal psychology and just why it would be frightful social injustice to put this girl in San Quentin."

She turned to Nance Belden, drew the girl's face down on her breast and patted the rouged cheek. "See you tomorrow, dearie," she promised. "Be a good girl now and be nice to Dan McNamara, because he's one of the best friends you'll ever have."

"Kiss me again, please," Nance whispered. And when Lanny had complied, the girl came around the desk to Stephen Burt. "I want you to kiss me, too," she said. "You're sweet—thank you a lot."

When Dan McNamara and his prisoner had departed, Lanny and Stephen looked at each other throughout a long silence, which Lanny was first to break.

"That girl's clean, Stevie. Not a touch of the slattern about her. She could pass the Binet Intelligence test so fast she'd meet it on her way back. And she isn't tough at all. She's only trying to be, and she finds it uphill work."

"Defense mechanism largely," he said. "Better go home, Lanny. Get a good night's sleep and try to forget what a sad world we live in."

"It'd be a d-d sight sadder if you didn't live in it," she snapped.

Under stress of emotion, Lanny, as she grew older, occasionally indulged herself in a little mild profanity. Stephen didn't mind. He knew she was disillusioned, middle-aged in point of years, but old with the wisdom and sadness of the world, as only a doctor or a trained nurse can be; that she had earned her privileges. As a surgical nurse she had been sworn at by doctors whose nerves grew taut as piano wires, during a dangerous operation, and she had learned to give as good as she received—wherefore the men of her world respected her and liked her, for her courage and efficiency.

"See to it that you're on hand in court tomorrow morning, Stevie, with a sweet line of scientific argument to bewilder that judge and the district attorney," she charged a little later. "Good night, my dear boy."

Dear old Lanny! Once more had occurred to her the miracle of love. A stranger—a bit of flotsam and jetsam on the muddy sea of life—had looked behind her brusque, businesslike, belittling exterior and found the great

Let Our Motto Be GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD

Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

THESE "GOSH-AWFUL" HEALTH WORRIERS

The other day when I was in an elevator in one of the tall office buildings in Chicago, the guard stopped at a lower floor to let a woman on. She was in an irate humor, to say the least.

"Why didn't you stop on your trip down before?" she demanded. "You saw me standing there."

"How could I know you wanted to get on?" countered the guard.

"You didn't press the button."

"And do you think," said the woman, "that I'll put my finger on that bell with all the germs there are on it? Everybody pushes that button."

The guard shook his head.

"Lady," he said, "you'll have a gosh-awful time going through life if you worry about the germs on bells and door-knobs. How do you think you can escape them?"

Every one, particularly the physician, has met these worrying types of individuals. And the trouble is, that they give not only themselves, but every one connected with them a gosh-awful time. You can have no rest when you are with them. They make life miserable worrying about germs; they crane their necks hunting for drafts, so that some one has to jump up constantly opening and shutting doors and windows; and they're always wondering about their digestions. You can't mention a food in their presence without getting a long harangue about whether it is good or not good for them.

Health officials sometimes think that the indigestion worriers are increasing out of proportion to the increase in the population. Certainly the advertisements in the newspapers and magazines and on sign boards throughout the country that advocate cures for indigestion, sour stomach and dyspepsia, seem to be growing in number, and if these patent medicines did not have buyers, the advertising about them could not be so extensive. Indeed, one might divide the adult population into two groups; those that suffer from indigestion and those that do not.

Most of the digestion worriers are underweight; they have dried, leathery skins, puckered and wrinkled foreheads and a bored and self-sacrificing expression about the eyes; usually they are past the age of thirty-five. In every case they have too much time to think about themselves.

Our bodies are always with us. In the absence of other mental occupations, the worrier makes his body an all-important and ever-engrossing subject of thought. He creates an artificial little world around himself where in he lives exclusively. He is out of tune with his environment. He doesn't react as other people do to things that happen. His first impulse is to consider the possible ill effect these happenings might have on him. The woman who did not want to push the elevator bell because many other hands had pushed it, thought only of herself. She would be highly offended if a person coming after her did not want to touch a door knob that she had touched. She would always be holy in her own opinion, and no one else could ever be.

The indigestion worriers become food faddists. They cannot eat anything that is fried; they think a combination of milk and fish is poison. They cannot eat starches and meats at the same meal. They believe one thing this month and another thing next month. The errors in diet made by worriers are enough to put them ultimately under a physician's care. Constantly wondering if their food will agree with them is not a healthful pastime. As time goes on, the worrier avoids more and more foods, with the result that his diet become more and more unbalanced, and the consequence is that he worries still more. It is a vicious cycle that often culminates in a hospital bed.

To the physician the worrier is always a health hazard. When his physical resistance is worn down, as it will be, he becomes good soil for bacteria.

And then he not only is apt to get a disease himself, but he is also apt to transmit it to others. Because the worrier, thinking only of himself, is not usually concerned about protecting other people from his disease germs.

If you have a worrier in your family, you are not likely to make him see the unwisdom of his ways by lecturing him. You had best bend your energies in getting him interested in a hobby—something that will make him cognizant that there is a world outside himself.

And if he is the food worrier type, then don't play up to his whims. It is a mistake to say anxiously to the food worrier, "Would you like to have this, dear or would you rather have me fix you something else?" Put a well-balanced meal before him, and then let him take it or leave it. That may seem harsh treatment for "sensitive stomachs," but the World War army life cured many food worriers.

Of course, if the food worrier has really developed an intestinal upset, he will need a diet. But the physician should then prescribe the diet—not the worrier.

A 1000-foot parkway in the city of Glendale will be bordered with deodar trees which the city hopes will eventually form a Christmas tree lane similar to the famous Altadena mile of Christmas trees. Glendale citizens have already donated 25-foot high deodars which are being planted along the site by the city.

Statistics, which give no picture of the loveliness of the festival, say that over 1,000,000 people saw the 67 floats at Pasadena's 46th annual Tournament of Roses parade. Harold Lloyd was grand marshal. Muriel Cowan, 17, was queen, and Santa Barbara with her "Jay and the Peacock" float won grand sweepstakes prize. Over 6,000,000 flowers decorated the floats.

The trial of 17 Communists for criminal syndicalism is about to begin at Sacramento as prospective jurors are being quizzed before being accepted for the case. There are only 13 forts on the Pacific Coast.

President Roosevelt has asked the governors of California, Arizona and Nevada to submit to their legislatures bills authorizing cities of the Pacific southwest to take part in federal public works, slum clearances, low cost housing and rural electrification programs. These letters are taken as an indication that the government is planning extensive public works programs for the southwest region.

Mothers who like to dress their small daughters after the simple smart English manner will love this design. At first glance, nice as it looks, there seems to be very little to it. And the side pleats, which make it such a pleasant frock in which to romp are also decorative in a charmingly discreet manner. The sleeves may be long or short, and a hidden charm is a pair of more than ordinarily well-cut bloomers. Make it of cotton or sheer wool.

Pattern 9826 may be ordered only in sizes 1, 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 4 requires 2½ yards 36 inch fabric.

COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

Note: This is a weekly report from the San Mateo County Department of Public Health and Welfare, giving facts of importance for health protection and a list of all contagious diseases reported to the County Health Officer in the previous week, as required by law.

INFLUENZA

Influenza is an acute, highly communicable disease which is characterized by widespread outbreaks at certain intervals, these outbreaks at times reaching the proportions of pandemics.

The cause of influenza is not known. The ordinary case occurring between epidemics is often hard to diagnose, as there is no outstanding symptom which can always be depended on. Frequently the term "flu" is as vague as it is popular and may, in many cases, be due to a common cold or a short febrile attack from some unknown cause.

When influenza gets under way as a world wide epidemic, it is a serious matter, not alone due to its sudden rise in virulency, but more particularly to the large number of cases.

The point in this discussion is simply this, that influenza is scarcely ever fatal in itself, death being due to some complication. In the last epidemic it was more often due to pneumonia.

Any scourge that can take a toll of 400,000 lives in six months should certainly be met and handled with due forethought and a definite plan. If every patient with epidemic or casual influenza would go to bed in a well aired, comfortable room and stay there until all fever and most other symptoms had subsided, it is felt that its fatality would be reduced by one-fourth. In other words, 50,000 to 100,000 lives would have been saved in the last great epidemic.

It has been brought home to physicians all too often that influenza does not kill of itself, but that fatalities occur with a dramatic and startling suddenness when pneumonia or other complications occur. Let us help to prevent these tragedies where a measure of prevention is so easily available.

Learned To Drive Early

Grace Moore, sensational screen, stage and opera star, who is to bring her golden voice to San Francisco for the nineteenth Annual Pacific Auto Show at the Civic Auditorium, January 19 to 26 inclusive, learned to drive an automobile while she was a very young girl. Miss Moore's father owned the first Cadillac in Jellico, Tenn., the famous prima donna's birthplace, and long before she ever dreamed of becoming the world's greatest soprano she was driving her father's car over the rough roads around Jellico and back into the Cumberlandlands.

The fact that the clutch is a dry plate does not indicate that lubrication is unnecessary, according to the California State Automobile Association.

The clutch release bearing, one of the hardest working parts of the clutch, requires regular lubrication. Consult the lubrication chart of your car to make certain on this point.

VANCOUVER COIN BACKS CLUBINE COMSTOCK WORK

Another Large Producer Is Soon To Be Added In Nelson District

With exposure of what has every appearance of being an important body of ore of good grade at the lowest level known as No. 5, Clubine-Comstock gives promise of joining the rapid growing list of productive mines in the Nelson District, says Sidney Norman in the Vancouver Sun.

At a point about 500 feet from the portal, a crosscut in a northeasterly direction from the main drift passed through a lamprophyre dike and found the vein on the inner side. Since then the orebody, with widths up to 6 and 8 feet, has been drifted upon a matter of 60 feet up till a few days ago and a carload of shipping ore accumulated on the dump.

In preparation for shipments, an ore loading pocket was immediately constructed and the first carload will soon be on its way to Trail smelter.

Considerable work will still be necessary before the exact nature of the occurrence can be determined. Apparently, the immediate area is much distorted and disturbed, three post-mineral dikes being identified but not directionally defined, but all dislocating the orebody.

The property is owned by Clubine Comstock Gold Mines, incorporated in Washington State, with capital of 2,000,000 shares at 10c par, of which 900,000 shares have been issued and 1,100,000 remained in the treasury a few weeks ago.

The present development work is being financed by a syndicate of Vancouver men, represented by G. R. Davidson, member of the Vancouver Stock Exchange, the main purpose being to develop at depth a body of ore exposed in upper workings and from which shipments of good grade have already been made.

Eleven claims are held by location; eight claims under option from Consolidated Smelters and one under lease from the Provincial Government. The company also owns two located claims on Hall Creek, 15 miles from Nelson, and a millsite at the mouth of Key Creek, a tributary of Boulder Creek, 3000 feet east of the mine workings and the same distance from the Nelson-Spokane highway.

The property is located two miles north of Salmo, at an elevation of 3400 feet above sea level, a branch road connecting with the highway and the Great Northern railway at Boulder Mill siding. The main Sheep Creek transmission line of West Kootenay Power & Light Co. parallels the railway at that point.

Two Veins Developed

Several veins are known to outcrop on the ground, but development has so far been confined to two known as the Upper and Lower. Both follow and are in contact with dikes, classified as augite-biotite-syenite by Dr. J. F. Walker.

The country rock consists of green stones and andesite, alternating with beds of argillite, the veins trending generally N. 20 degrees west, with dips of about 38 degrees to the northeast. The main vein is the upper vein being roughly parallel and about 200 feet to the southwest.

Outcrop of the main vein has been traced over 4000 feet and is marked by a pronounced depression due to erosion of a soft dyke running with the vein.

It has been developed by four adit tunnels, numbered 2, 3, 4 and 5 with a maximum depth from surface outcrop of 400 feet vertically, but considerable greater on the flat dip of the vein.

High Grade Shipments

No. 2 level was driven 180 feet on the vein and stopes carried up to surface over the first 40 feet, with resultant shipment of 115 tons of ore in three lots, running 1.12 oz. gold, 1.17 oz. and .90 oz.

No. 3 level is 270 feet long. From the first 85 feet of vein, stope to No. 2, 55 tons was mined, with average values of 2 oz. gold.

No. 4 was driven about 250 feet, with all but 50 feet on the vein, three carloads mined above the first 100 feet running 1.45 oz. gold for 82 tons. Three carloads shipped from further in aggregated 93 tons and ran 1.17 oz. gold.

This level exposed an orebody about 200 feet long, in two sections, the sampling of W. Norrie-Loewenthal, M.E., consulting engineer for the syndicate, giving an average value of .85 gold over an average of nearly two feet.

No. 5, at a further depth of 282 feet on the dip of the vein, was started to develop this important showing at depth, with the possibility that, if it maintained its width and value, approximately 15,000 tons, worth around $230,000, would be developed.

The recent strike was made considerably further from the portal than had been projected, indicating that the rake of the ore shoot is considerably flatter toward the northwest.

Another Shoot Indicated

The level is driven northwesterly from the bed of Key Creek, where a good surface showing was exposed. Another level has also been driven southeasterly from the other side of the creek bed, with indications that another ore body about 100 feet long lies below, extending from one adit to the other under the bed of the creek.

A well constructed camp has been built facing east over Salmon River valley, consisting of two-story bunkhouse, dry room, dining hall, office and garage, sufficient for a crew of 20.

The power house, at the portal of No. 4 level, houses an 80-horsepower Junkers diesel engine, belted to 348 cubic-foot Sullivan air compressor, with a 35-horsepower Le Roy engine and 100 cubic-foot Ingersoll Rand compressor as auxiliary. When considered necessary, power can be obtained from the West Kootenay Power and Light Co.'s main Sheep Creek line over a 3000-foot connection.

RECREATIONAL USE NATIONAL FORESTS PAYS BIG DIVIDENDS

For every acre of national forest land in California occupied by recreational uses under permit from the Forest Service the state receives $4.50, according to a recent survey made by L. A. Barrett, assistant regional forester of the Forest Service headquarters in San Francisco. These returns are made by the state to the thirty nine counties in which 8000 recreational special use permits have been issued in the eighteen national forests of California for summer homes, hotels, resorts and municipal or private camps.

Recreational permits are the most intensive of all uses of national forest lands, according to Forest Service officials. The 7500 acres occupied bring in a total of $135,000 per year in rentals, of which 25 per cent is returned to the State for distribution to the counties, in addition to what they collect in county taxes on recreational improvements having an estimated value of over $7,000,000.

SOME QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Some Little Known Matters That Should Prove of General Interest

(By Maude Larue Ives)

Question: What is the difference between a hare and a rabbit?

ASK FARMERS TO PROCURE SAMPLE CENSUS SCHEDULE

United States census enumerators will visit every farm and ranch in the nation during January, 1935, to take the mid-decennial Census of Agriculture. They will make inquiry as to farm ownership, farm acreage, which includes all crop land; all pasture land and all farm woodland; the total value of the farm; acreage and yield of the principal field crops and vegetables; the number of trees and yield of the principal fruits and nuts; number and value of each class of livestock, poultry and eggs, and farm population.

William L. Austin, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce, has declared that this is the most significant farm enumeration since the inception of farm statistics in 1840 and he earnestly requests the co-operation of all farmers, and ranchers to the end that complete and accurate statistics may be procured and tabulated at the earliest possible moment. The unprecedented destruction of crops and live stock caused by the drought and the many changes that have occurred in the utilization of land due to the depression make it imperative that the farm statistics be available as soon as possible, if agriculture is to be assisted in going ahead with other industries.

Farmers and ranchers can co-operate by writing immediately to Claude J. Hirschey, Supervisor of Census, 407 Mason Bldg., Fresno, Cal., or call by phone Fresno 2-9212, for a sample copy of the questions when the enumerator calls in January.

Gas Tank Vent

An old gas tank cap will sometimes cause the motor to balk, says the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. The cap is constructed so as to allow air to reach the fuel tank.

The vent in the cap may partially, or completely, fill up with rust or dirt. When this happens the car will stall or buck, particularly on a long pull. The remedy is a new cap.

Father Neptune Pictured as Both Friend and Foe

The sea is at one and the same time Holland's foe and friend. The ever-present menace of breaking dikes hangs constantly over the heads of the country's placid burghers. Perpetual vigilance is a necessity. Without it more than half of Holland's population of 8,000,000 might at any time be swallowed up by the sea.

At the same time, the canals, which have been built in the progress of reclaiming the land, provide Holland with the cheapest and most effective system of transportation. Today about two-thirds of the country's transportation of goods is by water. As a means of protection against invasion from an outside enemy, the sea also is Holland's most effective ally. In 1672 the armies of France, England and a part of Germany, at war with the republic of the Seven States of the Netherlands, marched on Holland. They would have succeeded in taking the capital but for a flood artificially created to stop the invasion of the enemy. At the beginning of the great European war in 1914, everything had been prepared to flood a part of the country in the event of Holland being compelled to take part in the war. It is related that years ago, long before the World war, the queen of Holland visited her neighbor, the then German kaiser, at Potsdam. In honor of the distinguished visitor a review was held of the kaiser's famous bodyguard. The kaiser, with a significant side glance at the queen of Holland, is reported to have said, "The soldiers of my bodyguard are all six feet tall." Whereupon the queen is said to have answered, "That is just two feet short of the depth of the water with which I can flood Holland."

The Conscientious Candidate

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Sitting by himself in a hotel room I found an old friend of earlier days, chewing a toothpick, and gloomily regarding a cheering crowd outside the open window where a man was standing in an automobile and addressing an obviously approving crowd.

"Is that your candidate?" I inquired.

"Not any more," was the surly reply.

"I thought you were one of his managers."

"Listen. That lad hasn't got any managers. I was one, but I ain't any more, and moreover, I won't be. I'm waiting for the next train that will take me back home."

"What was the trouble?"

"It would take more than between now and train time to tell you. That fellow hasn't got any political brains. I was up all night last week, writing him a speech—the regular speech that used to go big in all the campaigns I've been in. When I showed it to him, he read it, believe it or not, read every line of it, and then he said:

"But you've made a lot of promises here that I can't carry out. Nobody could carry them out. Don't you realize that I'd be expected to carry them out if I was elected?"

"Listen," I said, "you're new in this game, but you're smart, or any way I think you are, and you can learn. Nobody pays any attention to campaign promises except a few cranks, and they won't bother you after election day. You'll have a secretary to keep them from bothering you."

"What you've got to do is to let us old hands tell you what kind of promises will get votes, and then go and make them, and take the bows. You just attend to the talking—you're good at that—and we'll get somebody up from headquarters to hand you the speeches. The ones you've been writing ain't sound. You keep talking about not being able to perform impossibilities. That won't make you any votes. Now, don't worry, it will be all right; you just leave that speech with me and I'll leave in it anything that ought to be there, and let one of the bright lads I've brought along fix the rest of it for you."

"But," he says, "I wouldn't make a speech that somebody else wrote for me."

"You wouldn't, hey," I says. "Well, smarter guys than you has made 'em and grabbed off big jobs by makin' 'em, and after they were elected they managed to squirm out of 'em, like they all do."

"But that wouldn't be honest," he says.

"It wouldn't be stealin', or burglarin', would it?"

"Pretty much the same thing, yes."

"Now, what could you do with a bird like that?"

"Well, what did you do with him?"

"There wasn't nothing to do, of course, but just let him take the bit in his mouth. And a terrible mess he's made of it."

"Why, do you know the very next day he told a crowd out in front of the hotel that when he was elected he wanted 'em to come down to the Capitol and tell him if there was anything wrong with the way things was going, and if they had any complaints, and so forth. What do you think of that? After he was elected mind you. He'd listen to 'em after he had the job and didn't need to listen to 'em."

"I sat down then and tried to have a serious talk with him, and explain that nobody ever took campaigns seriously, and that he was to leave what happened after he was elected to older and wiser heads that had grown gray in politics."

"He was a little huffy at that, but I thought he could take his medicine, even if it didn't taste good, and set to work tellin' him, as I would tell a little child, what it was all about. And what does he do but turn on his heel and walk off!"

"The next morning I went up to his room, where he was makin' a lot of party leaders—poor old boys past fifty—chuck one of them medicine balls at each other just because he liked to get exercise that way."

"He was all smiles when he see me, and chucked the ball at me, meanin' to be playful, and it hit me on the ear and hurt. But I was so pleased to think he'd come around to my way of thinking that I didn't say anything till the other boys had gone.

"Then I said: 'Well, I see you ain't mad any more, so I suppose it's all right.'"

"You suppose what's all right?" says he.

"Why, the quarrel between you and me. I knew you wouldn't take that serious."

"No," he says, "I didn't take it serious. Here's another speech I wrote this morning." He handed it to me, and I put on my spectacles to read it, and found he'd said again that when he was elected he was going to be the people's man, and that the first professional politician who came to him to give advice or offer instructions would be chucked out of the window.

"Well, I just turned on my heel and walked away. Here am I, an' out there is he, givin' a talk to the people about the danger of trick politicians comin' into the offices an' tryin' to influence elected officials, and how, if he was elected, the first thing he'd do would be to try to get to ask for a law makin' attempts to influence an official a felony. A felony! Think of that!"

"What are you going to do about it?" I inquired, as he paused to catch his breath.

"Well, the trouble is, we can't do nothing about it. We ain't got nothing on him like we have with a good many of the men we nominate. He ain't made us no promises, which maybe was our fault, for we thought he'd be so glad to have us tell him what to do that he'd come in askin' for advice every day."

"It's too late to head him off now, and the worst thing about it is, he's makin' headway, and maybe will get elected in spite of all we can do to stop him, an' that'll be a lot, believe me."

"Look at him, out there, tellin' 'em he won't make no promises unless he knows he can carry them out, he won't have no boss directin' him in the discharge of his duty to the people, an' he thinks the mandate of the people is more important than the orders of all the political bosses that ever put their heads together in a back room."

"I suppose we got it comin' to us. We nominated him, because we took it for granted that he'd be a good boy and do what was right. But we have learned our lesson. He'll probably be elected, for he goes good with the crowd, an' he may get renominated—such fellows do, sometimes. But when he quits, an' we put in another man, that man is goin' to be our man, an' he's goin' to admit it in writin' before he gets his name so much as mentioned in the convention hall."

A sound of loud cheers came through the open window. The old politician grinned. "He's bad business for us," he said. "But I can't help admirin' his nerve, at that."

Crocheted Edges and Insertions

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

There are so many articles in the home that require an edging that needleworkers always want books on the subject so they can refer to them when looking for a dainty narrow edge for handkerchiefs or a wide edge for spreads, scarfs, etc. The edges shown here are narrow for handkerchiefs and give you an idea of the beauty in handsome edgings.

Book No. 26 on Crocheted Edgings and Insertions contains 72 patterns from which to select when an edging is wanted. A few motifs are also included for corners in napkins or tablecloths. The designs are old and new and illustrated in full size, with instructions.

Send 15c to our Crochet Department for this book No. 26, if you crochet and appreciate beautiful edgings.

PERHAPS MARINA HAD HER FINGERS CROSSED, ANYWAY

Brides married in the Church of England or the Protestant Episcopal Church of America have not had to promise to obey their husbands for the last six years. The so-called non-conformist creeds of England and America have not insisted on inclusion of the word in their ceremonies for an even longer period.

Roman and Greek Catholics, however, do not deviate from the older forms. Princess Marina of Greece and the duke of Kent were married under the rites of both the Anglican and Orthodox churches. Thus she swore to "love, honor, and cherish" in one language, to "love, honor, and obey" in another.

At the rehearsal of the Greek rites, the Orthodox deacon approached the princess and told her quietly in Greek, "the Greek church does not permit me to omit the word 'obey' from the ceremony."

"But leave that to me," he said, "I shall pronounce the ceremony in such a low voice when it comes to the word 'obey,' the duke will never be able to hear me."

"Never mind," said the princess, smiling, "make it as loud as you wish. It's all Greek to George, anyway."

One might add that "obey," for which the Greeks, too, seem to have a word, has not been literally interpreted by either brides or bridegrooms for a long time before the prayer books were revised in 1928, else they had not been revised even now.—Literary Digest.

Can Become Tiresome
Being what one's friends call a good scout is sometimes very tiring.

COUNTERFEIT MONEY

To prevent its clerks from accepting these and other bogus bills, the Post Office department described a method of detecting counterfeits—a method that every shrewd passer of the "queer" already knew, says Time Magazine. The method: Divide the serial number on every bill (except a national banknote) by 6. Compare the remainder with the tiny letter in the lower right corner. If the remainder is

1, " " " " A or G
2, " " " " B or H
3, " " " " C or I
4, " " " " D or J
5, " " " " E or K
0, " " " " F or L

If the letter is not correct, the note is counterfeit. But even if it is, the bill may still be counterfeit.

Safe on Earth

A pedestrian crossed a traffic-filled street while looking up at an airplane overhead. Three buses shaved him so closely that his beard didn't appear again for a week, the wind from six passing cars raised the nap on his last year's suit, one five-passenger car removed the shine from the back of his left shoe, and the drivers of seven others of assorted makes, while stripping their gears in an effort to avoid him, also stripped their vocabularies of every known high-powered adjective. After stumbling over the curbstone on the further side of the road the pedestrian was heard to murmur: "My gracious, those aviators lead dangerous lives.—Utica Observer Dispatch.

LIFE INSURANCE NOW ON UPTURN

New Department Has Been Installed By Subsidiary Transamerica Bank

An increase in life insurance underwriting during 1934, as well as a marked improvement in the character of business written, are noted by L. M. Giannini, president of Occidental Life Insurance Co., a subsidiary of Transamerica, in a summary of the past year's developments in the insurance field.

"Occidental Life will show a substantial increase in paid for business during 1934," said Giannini. "This is a true picture of progress, for it represents strict measuring stick showing a definite gain in the effective demand for life insurance."

Giannini, who is senior vice president of Bank of America, pointed out that there has been a marked increase in the market value of the securities in the portfolios of insurance companies during the past year.

"The portfolio of Occidental Life now includes substantial blocks of United States Government bonds acquired upon a particularly favorable basis," he said. "It is particularly significant that, despite our large volume of new business, which is always expensive for any insurance company to place on its books, Occidental Life will show a gain in earnings for 1934 over the preceding year. "Our program of expansion along sound, constructive lines was marked with the acquisition during 1934 of the American Medical Life Company of Spokane. In view of our faith in the future of the life insurance business, we shall continue to expand through extension of our present facilities and through further acquisitions."

"It is a virtue of life insurance that it keeps pace with the times. In consonance with this attribute, we have inaugurated a Life Extension Department, within our own company, the function of which is to prolong the lives of policy holders through periodic medical examination and diagnosis by qualified physicians."

"Because of the splendid manner in which life insurance withstood depression, the American public is again beginning to grasp the full significance of its benefits and public receptiveness is consistently increasing. There should be great progress in the field during 1935."

Home Owners Corporation Instrumental In Helping Distressed Citizens

Activities of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in the full year of 1934 in its efforts to aid distressed home owners have been marked by gratifying success throughout California as well as the nation at large.

"It has been a year of splendid attainment for the corporation," said W. O. Miles, state manager, reviewing the California situation, "and one of equal happiness for the thousands of imperiled owners who have been benefited."

"The growth in the number of homes saved to their owners in the past year has been phenomenal, especially as in thousands of cases the householders were at a point where they expected to lose their holdings through the imminent foreclosure."

"Just how great has been the aid rendered in the year, a glance at the records will show. On December 27, 1934, in the state, there had been closed loans numbered 1900 for $5,500,000 from the inception of the corporation in August of that year."

"The corporation was then just getting under way, but the organization attained momentum and the figures grew. In August, 1934, there had been closed more than 22,000 loans for $58,000,000. In November the totals were over 29,000 for $81,000,000, and on December 3 they had passed the 33,000 loan mark with a total of $29,000,000."

"Such steady growth is surely one to be proud of, and in this New Year era the Corporation extends its best wishes to those whom it has been privileged to aid."

Vision Sacrificed

Motorists who protested the lack of visibility of their cars sometimes nullify part of the justice of their complaint by being responsible for the condition, says the general service manager of the National Automobile Association.

A great deal of vision to the rear of many a car is sacrificed as a result of allowing the rear view mirror to become smudged and letting several layers of dirt remain on the window at the back of the body.

Both should be wiped off a least once a week.

Radio Interference

Radio experts report that static, or electrical interference, sometimes develops in a car radio as a result of certain parts of the car, other than the spark plugs, accumulating charges of electricity, says the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

Such charges produce a spark which creates radio interference.

MAN INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

A. C. Whitson of Yakima, Washington, who is visiting with his sister, Mrs. J. C. Overstreet of Bepler street, was in an automobile accident Tuesday of last week while riding up the highway with friends.

The machine struck a truck in Burlingame, throwing Mr. Whitson through the windshield. He was taken to Mills Memorial hospital suffering from severe cuts about the head and face, he remained there for three days. He is still under the doctors care.

FIRE DEPARTMENT OF COLMA INSTALLATION

The Colma Fire Department at its regular meeting installed the following officers for the ensuing term:

Chief, M. Balestra; assistant chief, M. Bollentini; captain, J. Selmi; lieutenant, J. Garibaldi; first assistant lieutenant, C. Benedetti; second assistant lieutenant, M. Bollentini; marshal, W. Baumeister; first assistant marshal, F. Bertetta; second assistant marshal, R. Franzola; recording secretary, A. Cecchi; assistant secretary, J. Thompson; treasurer, A. Lagomarsino; entertainment committee, A. Conserva, R. Molani and P. Valenti; publicity committee, P. L. Peterson.

Mr. P. Valenti, secretary of the San Mateo County Firemen's Association, was the installing officer.

Installing Tire Chains

Metal tire chains should always be left with a certain amount of "play," advises the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

Tight chains have a tendency to cause damage to tire casings. The rounded sides of the cross links should always be placed against the rubber and the rough clinched ends next to the road surface.

JOTTINGS FROM THE LOCAL FIELD

Jack Fitzgerald, pioneer mining man from the Portland Canal district of Alaska, is "outside" once more after a full season spent on the property owned by his brother Sam and himself.

He was very optimistic over the outlook for his section of the North and states in no uncertain terms that finally after years of patient prospecting, Portland Canal is coming into its own and will take its proper place in the van of Northern mining districts.

He said: "That country up there around Hyder and Stewart is looking better right now than it ever has since Pap Stewart drove his first stakes. We have had our ups and downs in the past but most of our troubles have been caused by overconfidence in our camp."

"Of course the real mining men in the camp knew that the only way to prove a district was to wear out steel and burn powder and that takes time. Mines are not found, they are made and it takes a lot of time, money, and hard work to make a mine. Of course the Premier was our big producer, and I believe that today with the new ground acquired by the management it is a bigger and better mine than it ever has been before."

Egbert Wycliffe Jackson passed peacefully away recently at Dawson, after a prolonged illness, according to the Dawson News.

Mr. Jackson was born at Hampton Village, New Brunswick, on October 21, 1860, coming to the Yukon in the great rush of '97-'98 and locating on Indian River, where he followed mining and for a number of years was mail carrier for the district lying between Dawson and Indian River.

Not since the halcyon days of the famous Cliff Mine has the mining outlook for this section been as good as it is at present. Practically without an exception the properties under development are in a very encouraging condition and some of the newer finds are nothing short of sensational in the values they are showing up.

L. H. "Bert" and Mrs. Carvey, who have been in Valdez during the past summer looking after their mining interests, report a substantial boom in mining in the Valdez section and predict that a number of new producers will be added to the Valdez list this year.

LARGE EARNINGS ARE REPORTED BY BANK OF AMERICA

Co-operates With Federal Housing Administration In Extending Loans

Earnings of $11,443,000 for the year 1934 have been reported by Bank of America N. T. and S. A. and its associated state bank, the Bank of America (California). For the latter half of the year, earnings amounted to $6,229,000, or more than a million dollars a month.

Commenting on the year end statement, A. P. Giannini, chairman of the board and president, said: "The state of California has had an exceptionally good year, and its prosperity is reflected in the report of Bank of America, with total deposits of $997,696,000 as of December 31.

"The increase in farm value of crops and the gain in business activity in this state is marked by one of the largest increases in individual and corporation savings and commercial deposits ever recorded by our bank. These deposits showed a gain of $138,646,000 during 1934, out of a total deposit increase of $171,644,000 for the year.

"It is also indicative of the effect of the government's financial program, and of the accumulation of tax money in larger amounts than in recent years, that there was a large increase in public funds on deposit with us. With branches in 255 California cities and towns, Bank of America serves as an active banker for virtually all government agencies and political subdivisions in this state.

"The bank carries 1753 accounts of federal, state, county and municipal treasurers throughout our statewide system. These include the accounts of 194 post offices and the official checking accounts of 141 postmasters; 318 accounts of cities and municipalities; 202 county accounts; 98 accounts of irrigation, reclamation, water, utility, bridge and highway districts as well as accounts of the State Treasurer, the Treasurer of the United States and the Comptroller of the Currency.

"Bank of America has been one of the foremost banks of the nation in co-operating with the Federal Housing Administration during the past year. As of December 31, the bank had made 5371 individual home modernization loans in the total amount of $2,111,297. According to Alfred B. Swinerton, regional director of the FHA, this amount is approximately equal to the total modernization loans made by all other banks in California."

Bank of America declared dividends aggregating $3,851,250 during 1934 and allotted $4,645,000 to reserves for depreciation, losses, contingencies, etc. The bank added $2,946,000 to undivided profits during the year, bringing the total of this account to $17,922,000 as of December 31. Total resources amounted to $1,167,754,000 at the year-end.

Now therefore, be it resolved, Consistent with recent American Legion declaration that the San Mateo County Council, The American Legion, requests all school boards, school trustees, principals and teachers of public and private primary and high schools and junior colleges, in San Mateo County, to immediately institute the uniform practice of commencing the school day with a salute to the flag and the Pledge of Allegiance thereto;

Resolved Further, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to all private day schools, school boards and to the press.
